

Safety Scenario #1

Tina and Andrew were using their materials and working on their activity. The bell was going to ring in a few minutes so they lined up at the door to be dismissed. Their materials were left on their desk.

What should they have done instead?

Safety Scenario #2

Gina didn't pay attention when the teacher explained where the safety equipment was found. Gina didn't think it was important. She thought to herself, "I'll never need that."

What should she have done instead?

Safety Scenario #3

Juan listened when the teacher explained the instructions for the activity. He thought to himself, "Well since I listened, I don't need to read the written directions."

What should he have done instead?

Safety Scenario #4

The teacher was not in the room yet. Jake began to get his materials that were in the front of the room. He touched a brown powder with his hand. Jake's nose itched, so he rubbed it.

What should he have done instead?

Safety Scenario #5

Heather and Jill were absent the day when the teacher discussed the directions for the lab. They gathered their materials and watched their classmates to see what to do.

Heather told Jill, "We don't have to read the directions, just watch that group."

What should they have done instead?

Safety Scenario #6

Cindy broke a test tube. She carefully picked up the pieces and gently placed them in the trashcan.

What should she have done instead?

Safety Scenario #7

Jose was pushing his friend Steve to be funny during the lab. The girls in their group started laughing.

What should they have done instead?

Safety Scenario #8

Paul had brought a bagel to school. Even though he knew he shouldn't eat it, he was really hungry and snuck a few bites.

What should he have done instead?
